Professor Angela Fawcett, is a leading international researcher on dyslexia, with a range of theoretical and applied contributions. Her approach is broad and interdisciplinary ranging from child and cognitive development to educational screening and intervention, and developmental cognitive neuroscience. She has worked with all ages with particular interests in pre-school, infant, junior and secondary children.

Angela was formerly a Reader in the Department of Psychology at the University of Sheffield, working mostly in collaboration with Prof. Rod Nicolson, but also independently. Following experience of dyslexia in her family, Angela was a mature entrant to academia, and has a BA and PhD in Psychology from the University of Sheffield. Her research into dyslexia with Professor Rod Nicolson has influenced both theory (via their Automatisation Deficit and Cerebellar Deficit hypotheses) and practice (via their dyslexia screening tests). She has published 8 normed tests, 3 edited books, over 100 refereed articles and book contributions, together with over 100 conference presentations, including keynote speeches at several international conferences on dyslexia. Angela is Vice Chairman of the British Dyslexia Association, editor of Dyslexia: an International Journal of Research and Practice and chaired the 2004 British Dyslexia Association International Conference.
