Stephanie Gottwald, Ph.D.

Stephanie is the Assistant Director of the Centre for Reading and Language Research at Tufts University. She is the author or co-author of articles on reading intervention and reading impairments and the upcoming book What Does it Mean to be a Reader? She is a linguist specializing in the interaction between the acquisition of spoken and written languages, she received her doctorate in literacy and language development from Tufts University and was the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship to Germany. Stephanie is a member of the Global Literacy Project, which seeks to develop a global, open platform solution to support child-driven learning across multiple domains of knowledge, and teaches university coursework on reading, dyslexia, and the brain and the use of technology in literacy instruction.

Stephanie has been to South Africa several times, she is a popular speaker and has run workshops here, presented at WITS and at the SAALED International Conference at the WITS School of Education in 2013.

The programme for the evening will include a “midwinter” meal, with an open bar where wine, soft drinks and fruit juice will be available.
